▶ P.S. 111 Pre-K Program

P.S. 111 offers a free, full day program designed to provide high quality educational experiences, and to enhance school readiness for eligible 3-4 year old children.

Children will be prepared for all five of the developmental domains that are critical to their overall well-being and academic success.

Approaches to Play and Learning

Children will actively and confidently engage in play. They will approach tasks, activities and problems with creativity, imagination, and willingness to try new experiences or activities. Children will develop persistence and problem solving.

Emotional and Social Development

Children will develop the emotional competence and ability to form positive relationships, recognizing themselves as unique individuals. Children will learn to self regulate. They will also develop positive relationships with adults and peers, in addition to pro-social problem solving skills.

Health and Physical Development

Children will use their large and small motor skills to engage in a variety of physical activities. Children will develop independence in their personal care and hygiene skills.

Language Development and Communication

Children will learn to express their ideas using a variety of methods. They will develop a growing receptive and expressive vocabulary.

Cognitive Development

Children will learn what they need to know and understand about their world, and how to apply what they know. Cognitive development occurs across all domains, and supports children's learning about the world in which they live.
